</forms/maine/mvt-6-application-for-new-vehicle-identification-number/>

For a vehicle whose identification number no longer exists. Maine assigns a fresh one, stamped with an M and an E, and a Bureau of Motor Vehicles detective attaches it to the vehicle in person. Two situations reach this form: a number destroyed or obliterated, which on a New England vehicle usually means forty winters of road salt, and a homemade vehicle that never had one. The reverse of the sheet is where it gets serious - a table listing every part taken from another vehicle, with that vehicle's own identification number beside it.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank MVT-6 from the Maine Bureau of Motor Vehicles at <https://www.maine.gov/sos/sites/maine.gov.sos/files/inline-files/MVT-6%20Assigned%20VIN.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	YOU	Owner details	Legal name, date of birth, street address and two telephone numbers. Watch out: Both phone lanes are worth completing. The next step in this process is a detective trying to reach you to arrange a visit.
2	YOU	Describe the vehicle	Year, make, model and body type. Watch out: For a homemade vehicle the make is what you built it as, and the Bureau would rather have a plain description than a blank.
3	YOU	The missing number, if known	The old identification number if any record of it survives. Watch out: An old registration certificate or an insurance document often carries it. Leaving it empty is honest, but finding it shortens everything that follows.
4	YOU	Exact current location	The street address where the vehicle physically is. Watch out: If it is in a field behind the house, say so on the line. The appointment is made against this address and the detective needs to reach the vehicle.
5	YOU	Tick why	Destroyed or obliterated, homemade, or Other with an explanation. Watch out: Other is for anything that is neither corrosion nor construction - a replacement body shell, for instance. Explain it in one line rather than leaving the assessor to guess.
6	YOU	Sign the undertaking	The signature under the printed paragraph about inspection and about applying for a title where the vehicle is inside the title window. Watch out: That paragraph is a commitment, not a preamble. Signing it while intending to skip the title application is the wrong start to a process that ends with a detective at your gate.
7	YOU	Complete the parts table	Every part taken from another vehicle, the vehicle it came from, and that vehicle's identification number. Watch out: Donor numbers can be nine to seventeen characters, so an older part with a shorter number is expected rather than a problem. An unlisted part found during the inspection is the problem.
8	YOU	Post the package	The signed application, copies of the ownership chain, and the fee to Secretary of State. Watch out: Copies, not originals. The chain of ownership documents are the ones you will want back and the instruction asks for copies for exactly that reason.

What gets this one rejected

- A location box giving a town rather than a street address, when a detective has to find the vehicle.
- A reverse left blank on a homemade vehicle. If parts came from elsewhere, the table is the substance of the application.
- A parts row naming a component with no donor identification number beside it.
- An application with no evidence of the chain of ownership behind it, which the mailing instructions require as copies of documents.
- A signature with no reason box ticked.
- An applicant who will not undertake to apply for a title where the vehicle is inside Maine's title window, which the printed sentence above the signature commits them to.

☒ Amber is what you write ☐ Grey is a block somebody else completes The filled-in example is at the start of this sheet.
